– Declaration of the Presidency on behalf of the European Union on the arrest of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi of 14 May 2009

– having regard to Rule 122 of its Rules of Procedure,

A. whereas Burma's human rights record continues to deteriorate ahead of the announced elections in 2010; whereas citizens are systematically denied basic freedoms including freedom of expression, association, and assembly;

B. whereas in 2009 the Burmanese government conducted two prisoner amnesties, releasing 6,313 prisoners in February and 7,114 in September, but only 31 of those released in February and an estimated 130 released in September were political prisoners.; whereas an estimated 2,100 political prisoners remain in prison including more than 230 Buddhist monks involved in the 2007 protests remain in prison;

C. whereas the military continues to perpetrate human rights violations against civilians in ethnic conflict areas, including extrajudicial killings, forced labour and sexual violence;

D. whereas Aung San Suu Kyi, leader of the opposition National League for Democracy (NLD), has been under house arrest since 2003; whereas on May 14, 2009, authorities arrested her on charges that she breached the terms of her house arrest by permitting the visit of an American, John Yettaw; whereas on August 11, 2009, a criminal court inside Insein prison in Rangoon sentenced Suu Kyi to 3 years of imprisonment for violating her house arrest, a sentence which was subsequently reduced to 18 months of house arrest;

E. whereas for the first time after 20 years parliamentary elections are foreseen at the end of 2010;

F. whereas in May 2009, attacks by the army and the Democratic Karen Buddhist Army (DKBA) displaced thousands of civilians and forced an estimated 5,000 refugees into Thailand; whereas in late July attacks by Burmese army troops against 39 villages in central Shan state displaced an estimated 10,000 civilians in the area;

G. whereas there are an estimated half-million internally displaced persons in eastern Burma, over 140,000 refugees remain in nine camps along the Thailand-Burma border and over 200,000 Rohingya live in refugee camps or scattered over southeastern Bangladesh; whereas Millions of Burmese migrants, refugees, and asylum seekers live in Thailand, India, Bangladesh, and Malaysia and are sometimes subject to trafficking;

H. whereas 3,000 ethnic Karen refugees who were forced to flee into Thailand in June 2009 are facing forced return to Burma starting on February 5th; whereas the “voluntary” repatriation, as it is being called, is anything but “voluntary”, the refugees rightfully fear human rights abuses which await them upon their forced return, such as forced labour and forced recruitment into regime-controlled armed forces;

I. whereas there has been an unprecedented crackdown by Bangladesh law enforcement agencies against unregistered Rohingya refugees who had settled outside the two official refugee camps in Cox’s Bazar District started on 2 January 2010; more than 500 Rohingya have since been arrested; and some of those arrested were pushed back across the Burmese border and others were charged under immigration legislation and sent to jail;

J. whereas that more than 5,000 self-settled Rohingya in Bangladesh already fled their homes and flocked to the Kutupalong makeshift camp in Ukhia in search of safety; which has now swelled to an estimated of over 30,000, who do not receive food assistance and are now denied access to livelihood as they would face arrest if they leave the camp to find work;
